Summary

Koon House #3 is a single-story, gable roof residence constructed of relatively small logs placed vertically and split in half so that the round, unfinished side faces the exterior while the smooth, flat side faces the interior. Its floor plan is basically rectangular, the only exception being a small, projecting bay located at the building's southeast corner. A single small brick chimney rises through the ridgeline toward the eastern or rear elevation. The building is supported on concrete block piers and covered with an asphalt shingle roof.

Elaboration

Koon House #3 is a single-story, gable roof residence constructed of relatively small logs placed vertically and split in half so that the round, unfinished side faces the exterior while the smooth, flat side faces the interior. Its floor plan is basically rectangular, the only exception being a small, projecting bay located at the building's southeast corner. A single small brick chimney rises through the ridgeline toward the eastern or rear elevation. The building is supported on concrete block piers and covered with an asphalt shingle roof. It is surprisingly unaltered.

The western or front elevation is dominated by a gable roof porch supported upon four log posts. A central concrete stair accesses the wood plank porch floor and the single-leaf entrance beyond. A single three-over-one wood window is placed to the north of the door, and a pair of identical windows lights the wall to the south. Horizontal novelty siding fills the pediments of the gable ends. The eastern elevation opposite is lit by a large three-over-one wood window to the north, a smaller pair of identical windows placed just to the south of center, and another single-leaf entrance near the southern wall.

The northern elevation is lit by two evenly spaced pairs of large, three-over-one wood windows. The southern elevation is lit by an identical pair of windows in the wall section to the west of the projecting bay. The bay itself appears to have had windows placed on all three of its sides originally; however, it now has only a single three-over-one wood window placed near the center of its southern face.

A well and concrete storm cellar -- both of which are placed to the south of the house -- are included in the nomination and appear to be historic; they are thus considered to be contributing. Koon House #3 is in good condition.

Summary

Criterion C, local significance

Koon House #3 is being nominated to the National Register under Criterion C with local significance by virtue of both its distinctive vertical, split log construction and its direct association with Hillary Henry "Pappy" Koon, the local farmer and carpenter who built these unique structures. As such, it is associated with the historic context The Vertical Split Log Buildings of "Slabtown," Arkansas, 1935-1945 and the historic significance of these properties noted therein.

Elaboration

Built c. 1940, the building known as Koon House #3 was constructed by local farmer and carpenter Hillary Henry "Pappy" Koon as one of several vertical split log buildings he constructed for residents of the relatively new community that sprang up along State Highway 167 south of Sheridan after it was paved by the state.

It was this building and the others built like it that gave the community the name of "Slabtown," as it was mistakenly believed that these buildings were of slab construction, which in fact they were not. Rather, the split vertical logs are notched into a sill below and plate above which supports the roof, and the logs serve as the load-bearing structure of the building. It is this unique construction method that distinguishes these buildings architecturally and thus the reason for their nomination.
