Summary

Koon House #4 is a single-story, intersecting gable roof residence constructed of relatively small logs placed vertically and split in half so that the round, unfinished side faces the exterior while the smooth, flat side faces the interior. Its floor plan is irregular, with a recessed porch being placed at both the northwest and southeast corners. A single small brick chimney rises through the ridgeline toward the eastern or rear elevation. The building is supported on brick piers and covered with an asphalt shingle roof.

Elaboration

Koon House #4 is a single-story, gable roof residence constructed of relatively small logs placed vertically and split in half so that the round, unfinished side faces the exterior while the smooth, flat side faces the interior. Its floor plan is irregular, with a recessed porch being placed at both the northwest and southeast corners. A single small brick chimney rises through the ridgeline toward the eastern or rear elevation. The building is supported on brick piers and covered with an asphalt shingle roof.

The western or front elevation features a recessed porch set beneath the pediment of the main gable section of the house. Two square wood posts support the center and northwest corner of the porch roof. Two single-leaf entrances provide access into the western and northern walls beneath the porch roof, and a single three-over-one wood window lights the western wall to the north. The side gable wall to the south is lit by three large three-over-one wood windows.

The southern elevation is composed of the end gable of the original intersecting log section to the west and the wall of the later addition to the east. The log section is lit with a single, centrally placed three-over-one wood window while the newer wall to the east is fenestrated with two smaller one-over-one wood windows. The recessed porch set into the southeastern corner finishes the elevation, and reveals a single-leaf entrance set into the southern wall thereof.

The eastern elevation is composed of the recessed porch to the south and a gable end to the north. The porch is lit with a single window to the south and accessed via a single-leaf entrance placed toward the north. The gable end appears to have been an open porch originally, with the window openings since filled-in. The northern elevation is composed of a single window placed toward the east and two pair of larger wood windows placed evenly in the wall to the west.

The alterations to this building are largely limited to the later addition that wraps around the southern and eastern elevations. However, it should be noted that these additions are toward the rear and are not visible from the principal elevation.

A non-historic shed roof storage building is included in the nomination; it is non-contributing. The Koon House #4 is in good condition.

Summary Criterion C, local significance

Koon House #4 is being nominated to the National Register under Criterion C with local significance by virtue of both its distinctive vertical, split log construction and its direct association with Hillary Henry "Pappy" Koon, the local farmer and carpenter who built these unique structures. As such, it is associated with the historic context The Vertical Split Log Buildings of "Slabtown," Arkansas, 1935-1945 and the historic significance of these properties noted therein.

Elaboration

Built c. 1940, the building known as Koon House #4 was constructed by local farmer and carpenter Hillary Henry "Pappy" Koon as one of several vertical split log buildings he constructed for residents of the relatively new community that sprang up along State Highway 167 south of Sheridan after it was paved by the state.

It was this building and the others built like it that gave the community the name of "Slabtown," as it was mistakenly believed that these buildings were of slab construction, which in fact they were not. Rather, the split vertical logs are notched into a sill below and plate above which supports the roof, and the logs serve as the load-bearing structure of the building. It is this unique construction method that distinguishes these buildings architecturally and thus the reason for their nomination.
