National Register of Historic Places Continuation Sheet

Section number 7 Page 1

Description

The Ferguson Gas Station is a single-story commercial building constructed c. 1927 of irregular-coursed cut sandstone with "grapevine" mortaring and brick quoins at the corners and around the windows and doorways. The structure rests upon a continuous stone foundation and is covered by a composition-shingled gable roof with a steeply pitched cross gable on the front elevation. There are no chimneys.

On the front, or northern elevation, a central entrance with a nonhistoric door is placed directly underneath the aforementioned steeply pitched cross gable and is flanked by two symmetrical one-over-one "picture" windows with the smaller upper pane. The eastern elevation consists of a boarded-over window and a bathroom door with transom at the southern corner. A brick-trimmed oculus attic vent is located near the peak of the gable end. The rear, or southern, elevation is not fenestrated and abuts a concrete retaining wall that is half of its height. The western elevation contains a solitary one-over-one "picture" window that is off center to the north and a matching oculus attic vent.

The interior was not accessible.

Located at the northeast corner of U. S. Route 65 and Center Street in Marshall, the brown-painted former gas station is in good condition.

Significance

The Ferguson Gas Station was constructed c. 1927 by Zeb Ferguson and Doc Treat. Ferguson owned the gas station and leased it to different gas companies. This gas station represents a vernacular interpretation utilizing local building techniques of the English cottage-type stations that were first built and popularized by the Pure Oil Company beginning in the mid-1920's. For these reasons, the Ferguson Gas Station is being nominated under Criterion C with local significance.
