Description

The C.D. Kelly House is a one-and-one-half story, structural brick wall Craftsman residence. The gable roof main house block shelters a fundamentally regular plan. A chimney which formerly rose through the roof of the raised, central upper story section has been removed, leaving only a square brick chimney just behind the same raised central section. The roof is covered with composition shingles, the walls are brick and novelty siding, and the foundation is constructed of brick piers.

The front or eastern elevation is composed of a raised half-story dormer surmounting a parallel gable roof main house block with asymmetrically-placed, single story wings to the north and south. A gable roof entrance porch which covers a raised concrete patio accessed by opposite side entrance stairs projects from the center of the elevation. The porch roof is constructed of wood and the pediment has been stuccoed. It is supported on a pair of brick piers which are connected by a low, solid brick wall. The wall behind is fenestrated with a group of three wood sash windows to the south--two six-over-one windows flanking a twelve-over-one window--and a pair of two nine-over-one windows to the north. The wall of the northern wing is blank but the wall of the southern wing is punctuated by two pairs of ten-pane casement windows. The raised parallel gable dormer above is lighted with two groups of three nine-over-one wood sash windows. The cornices throughout display exposed rafters and the gable ends feature knee braces. The raised dormer is also stuccoed.

The northern elevation is fenestrated by five wood sash windows, two in the gable end wall of the main house and three in the gable end of the single story wing. A novelty-sided rear shed on the western elevation is half-screened from this side. A rear carport also extends from the western elevation. The southern elevation is fenestrated by two pairs of casement windows in the projecting center gable roof wing and another pair to the north in the wall of the main house. The northern shed from which the carport projects is fenestrated with a pair of wood sash windows.

The western elevation features the recessed northern shed with its entry and full screens, and the southern shed with its two pairs of wood sash windows and projecting carport. The western elevation of the southern wing is also fenestrated with two pairs of casement windows.

An original storage building is also included in the nomination.

With the exception of the addition of the novelty sided sheds on the back of the house, the C.D. Kelly House is intact. It is in good condition.

Significance

Criterion C, local significance

The C.D. Kelly House (Part E, Historic Context #4)--named for its builder--is the best example in Judsonia of a one-and-one-half story, structural brick wall Craftsman style residence. This very high-style Craftsman design strongly resembles not only some of the other earlier high-style Craftsman designs but is also strongly reminiscent of the Greene and Greene home designs that so strongly influenced the Craftsman aesthetic and how it was rendered across the country. As such, the C.D. Kelly House, in addition to its obvious merits as a Craftsman design, stands as a particularly good example of the first phase of the evolution of Craftsman house design in White County, when the aesthetic was still relatively new and the resulting designs drew more directly from the design ethos which stressed rambling, functional plans, picturesque elevations of various indigenous materials, and low, spreading eaves which emphasized the design's site and inevitable relationship with the earth.
